Mitral Valve Repair 4.0: Robotic Endoscopic Approaches to Complex Pathology

T. Sloane Guy, MD, MBA, FACC

Dr. Guy is an Associate Professor of Cardiothoracic Surgery and Director of Robotic Cardiac Surgery at Weill Cornell Medicine/NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital, prior to which he was Chief of Cardiothoracic Surgery and Robotics at Temple University in Philadelphia.

Having attended Wake Forest University on an Army ROTC scholarship, Dr. Guy was a walk-on varsity football player, graduating Magna Cum Laude with honors in 1989. With help from the U.S. Army's health professions scholarship program, Dr. Guy earned both an M.B.A. in Healthcare Administration from the Wharton School of Business and his M.D. from the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine. At Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Dr. Guy completed his general surgery internship before becoming a general medical officer and commander of a U.S. Army family practice clinic in Germany. From there he returned to Penn, where he completed his general surgery residency and cardiothoracic surgery research and clinical fellowships.

Dr. Guy completed his military service in 2010 as a Lieutenant Colonel after serving three tours as a combat surgeon in Iraq and Afghanistan, and the U.S. Army recognized Dr. Guy with many awards, including the Combat Medical Badge, Combat Action Badge, Meritorious Service Medal and the Bronze Star. Dr. Guy has extensive training and experience in robotic cardiac surgery and was named one of New York Magazine's Best Doctors in 2016, a Philadelphia Magazine "Top Doc" from 2012-2015, a U.S. News & World Report "Top Doctor" in 2012, 2013 & 2014 and one of Castle Connolly Top Doctors, Edition 12th, 13th and 14th.
